

Relative Pronouns and Embedded Clause

Do you want to add some interesting information to your sentences? Try putting an extra information clause in the middle to make a complex sentence. You will need to replace the subject with a suitable relative pronoun such as who, which, where, when, whose or that.

Look at this example, which shows you how to do it:

First simple sentence
(Main clause)

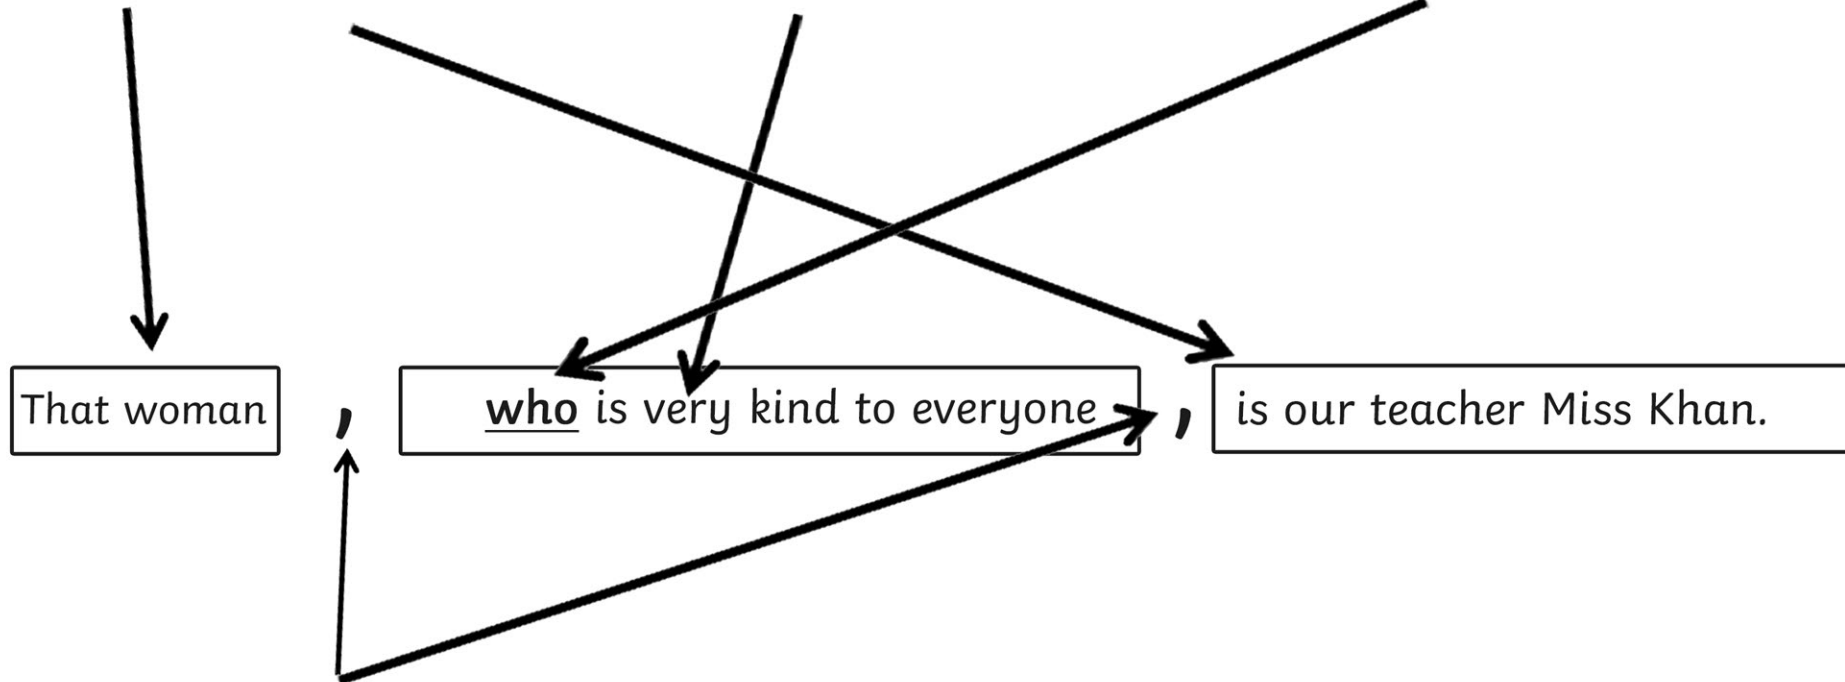

Extra information simple sentence
(Subordinate clause)

Relative pronoun

That woman is our teacher Miss Khan.

She is very kind to everyone.

(who)

Don't forget your commas!

Rearrange each pair of sentences so the relative pronoun (who/which) and extra information clause are in the middle. Write the new complex sentence in your book.

- 1) Chocolate contains 'feel-good' chemicals. Chocolate originated in South America
- 2) The Queen is one of the richest women in the world. She owns several castles
- 3) Australia has many unusual animals. Kangaroos come from there.
- 4) At 8 o'clock last night I went to bed. I had finished my homework then.
- 5) The author Phillip Pullman is my favourite writer. He wrote Clockwork.
- 6) Abigail is Star of the Week. Abigail's work is always brilliant.
- 7) Tonight we're having fishcakes for tea. I hate fishcakes.
- 8) Christopher Columbus is said to have discovered America. His nationality was Italian.
- 9) Westminster Palace is in London. Parliament meets there.
- 10) During the 19th century Britain became extremely powerful. Victoria was queen then.