Brass Heads

The people of Edo believed that the head was the most important part of a person, where the intelligence was found. When an important person died, artists would make a head of that person. Obas' heads, and those of gods or goddesses, were made from brass. People believed that the person's spirit could be contacted through the brass head. Artists made their work only for the Oba and he rewarded them with gifts.

Artefacts from the Kingdom of Benin

Masks were made for use in ritual ceremonies and represented a link to the spiritual world. This mask of Queen Idia, who was the mother of Oba Esigie, dates back to the 16th century. It is made of ivory and features intricate carvings showing skilled craftsmanship.

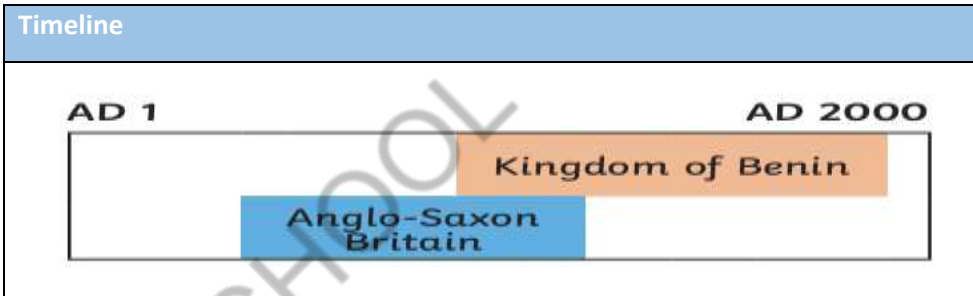

This double bell or Egogo, was used by the Oba to scare away evil spirits during religious ceremonies and acts of worship. It is believed to be from the 16th century and it features intricate carvings showing the Oba and his followers.

Coral beads have a special significance in traditional Edo customs. The beads are made from coral stones from the seas, which are polished and shaped. Edo chiefs would wear necklaces of coral beads and the Oba would wear necklaces, collars and crowns made from them.

Religion

The people of Edo's beliefs were centred around a creator god named Osanobua and his many children. People believed that, after death, Osanobua would decide their fate. They would either be reincarnated as another person or would join the spirit world. Spirits would live in villages together, watching the behaviour of their families and punishing bad behaviour. Religion was particularly important to the people of the Kingdom of Benin. Ceremonies were led by an ohen and were intended to make the Oba seem powerful and great, as well as to worship the gods. There were celebrations held across the year that linked to the season, including harvest. The people of the Kingdom of Benin were all thoroughly involved and provided food and handmade costumes for the celebrations. The people of Edo were animists. Leopards, crocodiles and snakes were among the animals associated with the gods.
